The flat, Llano Estacado mesa of west Texas is known for cattle and cowboys, oil and sandstorms, and religious people... each with their own dreams of happiness. The happiness dreamboat of two young people in love has often run aground on the rocks of money or religion, but occasionally even a college education can wreck happiness or religion for one or both. This is a story about evolution and belief in God, and what these concepts can do to two young people in love. Problems arise when one of the two begins to say, "I'm not sure I believe!" and a terrible tragedy complicates the belief of the other. Decisions, decisions, decisions. We make multiple decisions every day. These young people found that some decisions last longer than had been anticipated, cost more in money and spent emotions than had been imagined, and affected more people than originally planned. Follow Dan and his decisions about four different girls as he struggles with decisions about evolution, his faith, who to marry, and when to marry.
