The book focuses on parents with average students in their families. From the primary school, the children involve themselves in the competition frontline. The parents have to keep a close watch on their children's academic marks and examination grades. Because the primary school is the period for the pupils to build up the foundation. The poor foundation may influence their learning adversely in the middle school. In addition, under the established education system, with poor academic performance, the pupils may fail to be admitted to an ideal middle school, which also influence them to be admitted to college negatively - how farsighted the parents are!
